MISS ZINDERSTEIN IN WINNING STROKE

Boston Girl Reaches Top of Her Game on Heights Casino Courts.

FOUR PLAYERS SURVIVE

Miss Wagner, Mrs. Waring and Mrs. Wood in Semi-Final Round.

Whatever defects may have marked he performance of Miss Marion Zinderthe performance of Miss Marion Zinderstein of Boston in her opening matches of the Heights Casino invitation tennis tournament on Tuesday had been eliminated completely when she took the court yesterday for her third round match in singles. She stroked with more confidence, as though satisfied that she had become thoroughly familiar with the light, the background and the bound off the floor. The errors that came frequently the previous day were conspicuous this time only by their absence. At the same time she launched a swift, hard hitting attack against Miss Caroma Winn, racing all over the court, smothering shots at the net and driving with accuracy and precision.

Despite a commendable effort on her part, the New York girl was unable to win more than one game in the first set and three in the second. Miss Zinderstein was stroking with equal facility forehand and backhand and earning a majority of her points either by voileying or by angling short cross court shots over the net. Miss Winn gave no point up as lost and raced hard after every one of them, but her opponent's placing caught her too far out of position.

While Mrs. Rawson Wood indicated by her splendid tennis against Mrs. De Forest Candee that she will give Miss Zinderstein her hardest match to date when they meet in the semi-finals this morning, there is little reason to expect other than a comfortable victory for the Boston girl. In the other semi-final Miss Marie Wagner, who held the national indoor tennis championship before Miss Molla Bjurstedt, now Mrs. Franklin I. Mallory, broke into American tennis, will oppose Mrs. Samuel F. Waring. This, too, should result in a more or less convincing victory for Miss Wagner. The final, New York versus Boston, is to be held te-morrow.

Sharp Angled Returns.

Sharp Angled Returns.

The marked difference between the performance of Miss Wagner and that of Miss Zinderstein yesterday was in the element of speed. The New York woman did not depend so much on a fast pace, but she chose her shots with the judgment born of thorough experience, forced her opponent out of position and sent the ball through the openings with wellnigh perfect control. Her returns were sharply angled and untakable. In the opening set of her match with Mrs. David C. Mills of Orange her tennis was effective in every respect and her rival was unable to place a single game to her credit. Toward the elose of the match, however, Miss Wagner showed signs of tiring and Mrs. Mills took advantage of the opportunity to win three games.

British Davis Cup Challenge on Way

ONDON, Feb. 2 .- A local sports

reporting agency states it is officially informed that the British Isles to-day forwarded a challenge for the Davis Lawn Tennis Cup, recently won in Auckland, New Zealand, by William M. Johnston and William T. Tilden 2d, represent-ing the United States.

Up to closing time at the head-quarters of the United States Lawn Tennis Association yesterday no word had been received of the challenge, ort that it has been cabled but the report that it has been cabled no doubt is authentic. There is noth-ing surprising about it. Challenges under the rules must all be in by March 1, and England has figured to be one of the early bilders for the International tennis trophy. The only English player who is fairly certain of being a member of the invading team is A. R. F. Kings-cote, regarded, now that James Parke has retired, as the British tennis ace. T. Mavrogordato and Arthur Lowe are other leading candidates for a place on the challenging squad.

As in all his other contests Francis, As in all his other contests Francis, after getting warmed up, practically ran away from his brother. Both were slow in getting started and for the first ten frames there was little to choose between them. In the eleventh inning Edgar, with a run of 44 overtook his brother and led for the first time. Francis, however, counted consistently for the next half dozen innings and was soon in the lead again.

HIGH LIGHTS AND SHADOWS IN ALL SPHERES OF SPORT

OT a bad trade for either the Vankees or the Senators—that imminent exchange of Bodie, Pipp, Baker and Output for Fig. In fact, we might say that it would be a very choice trade indeed, particularly in so far as the New York club is concerned. Do not take that to mean that the Senators would get any the worse of it. They would land to mean that the Senators would get any the worse of it. They would had to mean that the Senators would get any the worse of it. They would had to mean that the Senators would get any the worse of it. They would had not make the senators would get any the worse of it. They would not play men who would be of great use to them. But three of these seem to have outlived their usefulness with the Yankees, and one, Baker, will not play with them. So New York would get quite a bit of playing strengthing it about enough to top off the fine array which it already possesses without the four men who are slated to go.

Baseball, let it be said, is a mighty peculiar game. A man may be through with one major league club but may blossom forth into a star with another. Examples are plentiful. There is Jake Daubert, who was done with Brooklyn in 1919, but played a better game than ever with the Reds that grant you might point to Ed Konetchy, who was through as a major leaguer with the Braves, but became a star with the Dodgers. Or you might mention lay Olson, a hasbeen with Cleveland, but a mighty useful player with Brooklyn. There are dozens of other examples. Pipp, Bodle, Baker and Quinn most likely would do better work with Washington than they did her, and Rice and Judge would be even greater at the Polo Grounds than they were in the capital.

The passing of the four men who are slated to leave the Yanks would mark the abolition of the old Murderers' Row of the Yankees. Baker, Pipp and Bodie were arch performers in that set. Pratt, a fourth member, has gone to the Red Sox. Only Peckinpaugh would be left. The 1921 season, by service in the American League.

An outfield composed of Ruth. Roth and Rice would give Huggins two left handed hitters in the outer works. Roth is the only right handed hitter of the trio. Judge is a left handed batter, but so is Pipp, so there would be received from the Government. In case such a law does exist.

If Miller Huggins lands Sam Rice he will have that extreme satisfaction which comes with success after long effort. He has been after Rice all whiten resulted in his getting Roth. Clark Griffith insisted that Rice would not be traded, but along came Judge and started something. Judge is a holdout. He played good ball last season and hit better than ever before. He thinks that he is entitled to a big raise. They say that he demands $8,500 for next season—and let us say that he is worth it.

But Griffith does not want to yield to Judge's demands. He is afraid that if he did he would inaugurate a series of demands which would cost the club a pretty penny. So not so many days ago Griffith determined to trade Judge, New York would be home to Judge, as it was with the Edison Company team in Brooklyn that he first gained prominence. He got a trial with the Red Sox and then went to the Senators. With Gandil around Judge could not get a chance, but when Chick was sold to Cleveland Judge sprouted out as a truly great first sacker.

Rice's coming to the Senators makes rather an interesting story. He landed with Griffith from Portsmouth of the Virginia League in 1915 and was labelled a pitcher, with a penchant for hitting. The president of the Portsmouth club owed Griffith $800 and did not have the ready cash. "I haven't the money, but will send you a player. How about it?" he asked Griffith. The Old Fox took a chance. In 1916 he converted Rice into an outfielder, and he hit for 299. In 1917 he batted for 302.
